

ABSTRACT

The present invention involves the creation of an appropriate model and the use of that model to generate a best fit dipole represented by a vector (x, y, z) . Once the best fit dipole is generated, a best fit field distribution and a field distribution of a modified dipole is created. Using a difference between the field distributions, a Singular Value Decomposition is used to compute the main axes of the confidence ellipsoids.